Media and real sources mining, to sensitize the communities on hot news on various Nepal Governance Weekly is an analytical update of Nepal’s current affairs based on accountability issues from the perspective of accountability.

Governing Issues of the Week

1. The government’s implementation of the "Terramex" provision for recording personal details, including phone calls and text messages, has sparked controversy and concerns over privacy. The Supreme Court has directed the government to adopt measures to ensure that the provision is used responsibly and transparently. Critics argue that the provision goes against the country’s commitment to the international community’s view on human rights.

2. Nepal’s 5G trials are at risk of delays due to equipment import restrictions and geopolitical tensions that have slowed the country’s adoption of fifth-generation mobile technology. Critics argue that the country is missing out on potential benefits from 5G technology, while the government defends the move as necessary for national security and monitoring.

3. The Nepali government has implemented the "Terramex" provision for recording personal details, including phone calls and text messages, without the proper law, which has raised questions about transparency. Critics argue that citizens’ right to privacy is being violated, while the government defends the move as necessary for transparency.

4. Nepal Airlines Corporation (NAC) has suffered losses exceeding NPR 20 billion over six years due to mismanagement, notably due to nepotism and corruption. The Nepali government has implemented parole provisions as 6,000 prisoners may benefit from this decision, aimed at prisoner reintegration. Around 1,600 out of 27,950 prisoners may benefit from this decision.

5. The government of Nepal has set to implement parole provisions as charge sheets filed at the Special Court. The report also mentions receiving 20,905 complaints, primarily related to local government matters, and 20,905 cases during the fiscal year 2022-23, with 622 men and 138 women disclosed filing corruption cases against 766 individuals in 162 cases, to streamline FDI procedures and promoting investment in Nepal by enabling online license and approval applications.

6. The Nepali government has implemented the "Terramex" provision for recording personal details, including phone calls and text messages, without the proper law, which has raised questions about transparency. Critics argue that citizens’ right to privacy is being violated, while the government defends the move as necessary for transparency.

7. Nepal’s legal system includes a ban on pardoning those convicted of heinous crimes such as corruption, rape, human trafficking, and more, will not be eligible for parole. Around 1,600 out of 27,950 prisoners may benefit from this decision, aimed at prisoner reintegration. Around 1,600 out of 27,950 prisoners may benefit from this decision, aimed at prisoner reintegration.

8. The Nepali government has implemented the "Terramex" provision for recording personal details, including phone calls and text messages, without the proper law, which has raised questions about transparency. Critics argue that citizens’ right to privacy is being violated, while the government defends the move as necessary for transparency.

9. Nepal’s legal system includes a ban on pardoning those convicted of heinous crimes such as corruption, rape, human trafficking, and more, will not be eligible for parole. Around 1,600 out of 27,950 prisoners may benefit from this decision, aimed at prisoner reintegration. Around 1,600 out of 27,950 prisoners may benefit from this decision, aimed at prisoner reintegration.